Peacock

Males are called peacocks and are much brighter colored than females with shiny (iridescent) blue-green feathers. They have very long display feathers, called a train, that can reach 3.5 feet long and be spread out like a fan with rounded markings that look like eyes. They are spread to show off for females. These long feathers are not their actual tail but come off their tail coverlets.

- Draw incremental development stages of moon

Moon Phases

Color the dark side of the moon black, then color the sun and the Earth. Why is part of the moon dark and part light each night?
